TEACHING EXPERIENCE

- University of New Haven, Paris (in conjunction with CEA Study Abroad) 2006-2014
Adjunct Instructor of the University of New Haven in Human Rights
Designed, organized and taught courses in International Human Rights. Created active learning teaching modules, onsite lectures and cross cultural links with other CEA courses and colleagues.
Instructor in European History and the History of Paris
Designed, organized and taught these classes over several semesters. Created active learning teaching methods, on-site lectures and cross cultural links with other CEA courses and colleagues. In addition, I have created related content courses in European Integration, and French Studies and drafted the required syllabi for US based accreditation agencies. Teaching responsibilities at CEA were carried out as an adjunct instructor of the University of New Haven.
- Schiller International University, Paris 1987-2007
Professor of International Relations
Teaching focused both on graduate courses in the Department of International Relations and Diplomacy as well as on undergraduate courses in European civilization, international relations, diplomacy, and European politics. Graduate teaching included courses in such areas as International Organizations, International Human Rights, Conflict & Peace Studies, Research Methods, and Theories of International Relations. The undergraduate courses included traditional Western Civilization courses, the History of France, French Politics and Society, Modern European Diplomacy, European Politics and Society, European Human Rights, Europe Since 1945, and International Organizations. I directed numerous MA Theses and sat as Thesis Jury Member for many Master of Arts candidates.
- ESLSCA (Ecole supérieure libre de sciences commerciales appliquées) Paris 2001
Professor of Civilization
Here I taught a semester-long course on the History and Architecture of Paris which were entirely comprised of onsite lectures and study excursions.
- Institut Supérieur de Gestion, Paris 1994-1998
Professor of European History and Civilization
Although a business school, ISG offered for its undergraduate students area studies in European history and civilization. These courses I built and developed around the theme of the Idea of Europe. In addition to European History, I therefore added to the curriculum such studies as the European Union, European Institutions, and the Evolution of the Idea of Europe.
- The American University of Paris 1992-1993
Professor of International Relations
I taught the AUP classes in French Politics, International Organizations, and International Relations. I also sat as a member of the Academic Committee.
- State University of New York (Paris Extension) 1994-1997
Instructor of Contemporary French Politics, Culture and Civilization
- INALCO : Institut National des Langues et Civilisations Orientales 1993-1995
HEI: Hautes Etudes Internationales: Instructor of French foreign policy and American Civilizations in the HEI graduate program
- Université de Reims Champagne-Ardenne 1994-1995
Department of History: Instructor at both BA and MA levels in the areas of historical methodology and French foreign policy

Accent International	1989-1993
Instructor of various courses in French civilization, politics and history in conjunct with Accent's portfolio of provider programs with U.S. community colleges and universities.
University of Southern California (Paris Extension)	1990-1993
