

Response

Collaborative projects between students domestically and abroad

Photo sharing

video conversations with students in other countries rather than email intercultural learning, connecting intl. students on campus

Language partners

Highlight the value to students of why they should pursue this?

Buy-in and collaboration with academic depts. & faculty

Peer to peer connections

Virtual research collabs

Make it relevant to students video chats

Pairing students up and have them do live tour of their universities to each other social connection paralleling academics as well creating cohorts on platforms such as WhatsApp

We like to combine both virtual remote and abroad (traveling) students on some of the same Zoom/virtual activities (quiz nights, cooking classes etc)

storytelling from students

Conversation partners

Faster, more regular and consistent, visible reminders to our students connect with students/faculty at partner universities

Joint course projects/presentations
